

Call for papers Special Section on COVID-19 Research and Perspectives on COVID-19

Editors

Yarimar Rosa-Rodríguez, PhD.
Tomás Caycho Rodríguez, Mgs

Timeline

Manuscript submission: October 31, 2020
Publication: December 2020

Details

The Salud & Sociedad Journal invites the Iberoamerican community of researchers and academics to submit their manuscripts related to the impact of COVID-19. Topics includes but not limited to, community health, health psychology, behavioral medicine, public health, public policy, psychological impact of governmental policy. Special consideration will be given to works with underrepresented populations (eg. Women, children, natives' groups/ indigenous people, among other). Submissions can be qualitative, quantitative, mixed methods, or systematic review of the literature (following PRISMA o PICO guidelines) and can be presented in Spanish, English or Portuguese.

Manuscript will adhere strictly to the Publication Manual of American Psychological Association 7th Ed. There's no need to translate reference titles if the source is in English, Spanish or Portuguese.

All manuscripts must be submitted through the Open Journal System on the Journal portal and according to the guidelines for authors. Must include a letter to the editorial team specifying that want to be considered for the special section.

<http://revistas.ucn.cl/index.php/saludysociedad>

Researchers interested in submitting their work can make inquiries by writing to:
editor@saludysociedad.cl